

ROCKET BUSHCRAFT

ABOUT

'Ar Tir' (Our Land) is an outdoor project that enables participants to create connections with the natural world by learning through land and culture. Taking part in activities that are based on Scottish Gaelic culture can make learning active and experiential, as well as addressing current environmental issues. 'Ar Tir' is about exploring the local environment and discovering our relationship with it (past, present, and future).

ROCKET BUSHCRAFT

You find yourself stranded in a new and unfamiliar place, it's beginning to get dark... What do you do? There are three basic things to find in order to stay alive; shelter, warmth and food. Working with others in the same situation may be the key to survival.

You approach an abandoned building... is it safe?

Activities:

All activities are based on bushcraft and will contain an element of team building/co-operation.

- The pursuit of food - foraging for some common edible plants soon to be on the Rocket menu. Nettle burgers anyone?
- Gimme Shelter! Can you work with others to produce a habitable home in the woods?
- Fire by Friction. In teams we'll see who is the first in the race to produce a flame. The BBQ is not going to cook itself...
- Lost the plot - have you been walking in circles the whole time? Lets find out and find our way.

OUTCOMES

As well as having some fun and celebrating success this event is also about helping people to get to know each other better, improve communication and work together towards a common goal.

VENUE

We will meet at Harlaw Reservoir car park and adventure towards Thriepmuir Steading (Youth Vision).
